ENGL 4092/5092: AMERICAN MOVEMENTS

#BLACKVOICESMATTER

SECTION O001

INTERNET

ASYNCH

J. SAFFOLD

#BlackVoicesMatter sits in the wake of the recent surge of born digital protest movements spurned by a highly polarized America. Our current era, marked by #BlackLivesMatter, #MeToo, #SayHerName, and numerous other causes with digital roots, builds upon longstanding protest traditions in African American history. This history has indelibly influenced some of the greatest pieces of African American literature.

Together, we will use African American literature to consider how Black writers have chosen to respond to enduring injustices. We will critically engage fiction and nonfiction texts, paying close attention to how socio-economic and historical moments have impacted what and how African Americans write. #BlackVoicesMatter will draw literature from four moments of great civil or social unrest in African American history: the late slave period, the New Negro Renaissance, the Civil Rights Movement, and the current digital rights moment.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Discussion lead, weekly discussion questions, and a digital humanities final project.

D. RUTLEDGE

This course covers a variety of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century narratives of slavery – mostly of slavery and emancipation. The narratives are of the north and the south, concerning the lives of men and women, some with intrusive editorial hands and others with editors who are less intrusive. Our purpose is to see what is distinct in the narratives and what themes they have in common. We want to discover how they spoke in their own time and what they have to say to ours. In the final weeks of class, we cover three novels that depict American slavery. We will discuss some of the reasons why this topic continues to engage the imaginations of American writers.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: The class requires two tests, two essays, a final exam, and regular weekly participation.

TEXTS: All of the original narratives are available online. Students only need to purchase the three novels.

ENGL 4156/5156: ENVIRONMENTAL WRITING

SECTION P001

TTH

2:00-3:15 PM

J. MAXWELL

The goal of the course is for students to create science-based writing about environmental issues that is highly accessible to the ordinary reader. Students will participate and in turn lead weekly classroom discussions and exercises on a wide range of environmental themes selected by the class and two instructors for this course. Readings will be drawn from science journalism and popular texts by some of our best environmental writers. Science and non-science majors will collaborate to research and present a project and will also write an article suitable for publication. Through this class, students should become better scientists and better writers.

Note: this course should be cross-listed with BIOS 4513

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Class discussion and leadership, group projects, blog posts, and project presentations

HURSTON & WALKER

SECTION O001

INTERNET ASYNCH

J. SAFFOLD

Zora Neale Hurston was one of the most highly regarded Black woman writers of the twentieth century. Yet, she died penniless buried in an unmarked grave, resting in relative obscurity until Alice Walker went “Looking for Zora,” erected a tombstone on her gravesite, and insisted the world acknowledge Hurston’s brilliance. Walker also rose to prominence in her own right during the late twentieth century with her culture shifting novel, The Color Purple, coining the term womanism, and championing women’s issues the world over. The works of Hurston and Walker stitch together an aesthetic that is undeniably Southern, Black, and woman. By reading Hurston and Walker together, students will gain a better sense of how and why Black women’s literature is the foundation of Black feminist thinking.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Discussion lead, Weekly Discussion Questions, and creative research project.

ENGL 6153: UNO PUBLISHING LAB

SECTION W001

MW ONLINE

3:30 – 4:45
ONLINE

A.HIMELSTEIN

In conjunction with the University of New Orleans Press, this lab teaches students the publishing process, following a text from draft form to its final publication. The course will include workshops on editing for content, copy-editing, and publishing industry practice. Students will also learn the business side of publishing, including marketing, distribution, printing, and design of texts, as well as bookstore and author relations.

This class is designed to teach you how to take a manuscript and turn it into a successful book. Rather than doing this through lecture and abstraction, we will be doing this by choosing one book and taking it through the publishing process. As a part of this, we will be discussing publishing’s recent history and practices, marketing strategy, and the very basic question: What makes a book worthy of publication?

This course requires reading short portions of more than 60 manuscripts, and 10 complete manuscripts. Short written evaluations of these manuscripts are required, as well as a longer critique and edit of the winning manuscript.

We will read short pieces about publishing from a variety of sources.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Written manuscript evaluations; regular participation in discussion; global and line edits of one selected manuscript; and a final project related to the publication of the manuscript.

TEXTS: Biel, Joe. A People's Guide to Publishing

ENG 6161 is a graduate level fiction writing course in the "workshop" tradition. Students will write three new pieces each, one revision, and a short essay. Students will also compose written critiques on their peers' stories and participate actively in class discussion. The course texts are student generated, so no textbooks need to be purchased. Students should, however, budget for copying and printing costs throughout the semester.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Three new stories, one revision and essay. Weekly critiques.

TEXTS: No textbooks.

ENGL 6190: BAYOU MAGAZINE PUBLICATION AND PROMOTION

SECTION H001 T TH 3:30-4:45 PM B. JOHNSON
HYBRID HYBRID

A writer’s publishing career generally starts with submitting to literary magazines outside the university sphere. This course is designed to give future writers and editors real world, hands-on experience with both sides of publication. Students will learn how to choose the right magazines for their work and how to build a successful platform for promoting their work once it’s published. They’ll also get experience supporting the work of others. They’ll learn how and why editors choose or reject manuscripts as well as what it’s like to edit for or work with editors at a literary magazine.

Prerequisite: Student must be currently enrolled in either the CWW or CWL

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: The final project will be the layout, production, and promotion of an issue of Bayou Magazine, an international literary magazine.

C. HEMBREE

Each class member will design and create a portfolio of poems. Weekly workshops will respond to drafts and revisions of original student writing. This course will explore the place of awe, recklessness, paradox, curiosity, dread, and determination in the creative process. If the poem is "a House that tries to be haunted," what does it mean to succeed and to fail at this trying? Do the specters change or persist across a poet's oeuvre? How does the work continue when the world and even the poet no longer believe in it? Requirements include nine weekly poems, a revised portfolio of the semester's work, forum posts responding to peer writing, informal responses, a YouTube presentation on a mentor poet, and a final paper.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE:

Nine weekly poems, ten pages of revisions, workshop feedback on peer writing, forum responses to shared reading, a YouTube presentation on a mentor poet, a final paper, and participation in a class reading

TEXTS:

ENGL 6200: SEMINAR IN PLAYWRITINGSECTION W001*TH*6:00 – 8:45 PM*J. MAXWELL

At its best, playwriting takes the strengths of poetry, non-fiction, and fiction but reshapes each genre's skill set into a medium that has unique physical and temporal qualities. Moreover, playwriting is a mediated genre; the writer's words are not experienced directly by readers but are mediated to an audience via a host of other artists. This complex relationship poses unique challenges and opportunities for artists working in language. Those challenges will constantly inform the development of our work. Within this multifaceted approach, we will also look at the role of traditional and non-traditional narrative structures and how they operate on the stage.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: We will use workshops, peer responses, and in-class discussions to develop new plays.

MEDIEVAL WOMEN WRITERS

SECTION W001 TH 6:00-8:45 PM L. VERNER
ONLINE ONLINE

This class will provide the student with a comprehensive picture of the lives and literature of medieval women, in their own words. While many commonly assume that medieval women left few and inconclusive records of their lives, or that what literature as survives is of a strictly religious nature, in fact medieval women participated in a variety of arenas--political, courtly, scholarly, domestic and amorous as well as spiritual--and bequeathed to us their thoughts and feelings on many issues. Thus, the goals of this course are 1-to dispel misconceptions about female silence and marginality in the literature of the Middle Ages; 2-to provide as complete as possible a portrait of female experience from that period; and 3-to provide the student with the necessary literary and critical tools to engage in scholarly investigation and analysis of the literature under consideration and, by extension, of medieval literature in general.

“LAMENTABLE AND TRUE...”: DOMESTIC TRAGEDY IN EARLY MODERNISM

Prerequisite: consent of department. May be repeated twice for a maximum of 9 credit hours

SECTION W002 W 6:00-8:45 PM S. RICHARDSON
ONLINE ONLINE

In this course students will consider the significance of domestic tragedy in early modern drama, particularly those plays adapted from the true crime narratives widely circulated through the pamphlet literature of the day. Numerous authors, such as Middleton and Heywood, found an inspiration in such accounts that helped them to break new ground. Often dismissed as a genre too narrowly focused on the domestic sphere and resulting in moralistic admonitions, domestic tragedies in fact offered playwrights opportunities for dramatic experimentation at a time when the theater was rapidly evolving, allowing them to engage audiences’ growing interest in questions of authenticity and “truth” in fictional representations of real events, as well as bringing much needed attention to issues impacting the lives of contemporary women.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Assignments will include regular reading responses, two presentations, and a final research essay of 15 pages with an accompanying proposal and annotated bibliography.

ENGL 6941: THE CRAFT OF FICTION

SECTION P001 W 6:00-8:45 PM B. JOHNSON

This class is designed for fiction writers. We will examine short stories of various styles with a writer's eye toward identifying how they are constructed. Using craft essays to study the elements of fiction—plot, characterization, POV, narrative structure, style, etc--students will learn to identify the underpinnings of successful stories and to use that understanding in their own written work.

This is a required course for MFA students. Admission is contingent upon approval by the director of the Creative Writing Workshop.

REQUIREMENTS
INCLUDE: Each student will present a craft essay and short story, submit weekly craft essay summaries and story critiques, and complete several short creative writing projects. ENGL 6946: THE CRAFT OF DRAMA

SECTION P001 T 6:00-8:45 PM J. MAXWELL

This course provides graduate-level writers with a unique opportunity to delve into the craft of drama. Like a conventional literature class, this course uses close readings of texts and discussion of theoretical paradigms for insight into the material; however, this class looks fundamentally at construction methodologies for dramatic texts. The class shows students how diverse dramatists employ various structures to produce complex tonal and thematic results. From this study, students will explore the hands-on experience of crafting very short works to manifest the effects of specific craft elements.

REQUIREMENTS INCLUDE: Regular writing assignments, both creative and critical, will further explore course material and assess student learning.
