History

Approved

- HIST 6201 “Seminar in World History” - Course Drop
- MA in HIST – Intl & Global Studies Curriculum Change

Returned for more information

HIST 4201 “World & Global Histories” - Course Add and HIST 5201 “World & Global Histories” - Course Add

1. Please include the catalog description in the syllabus.
2. Please clearly label the syllabus components, such as “Student Learning Outcomes” and “Accommodations”
3. Please separate the syllabi for 4201 and 5201. Courses not only have to show the differing requirements for the two levels, but also at least one additional SLO for the graduate level.
4. Please review the existing SLO. They do not appear to be at a 4000/5000 level.
5. Preference, but not a necessity, to dissuade from beginning the catalog description as a question.

HIST 4885 “Special Topics in Public History - Course Add and HIST 5885 “Special Topics in Public History - Course Add – More information needed.

1. UCCC wishes to know the intention of these courses. “Special Topics” is usually used for courses are taught once or at the most twice as a Special Topic, a variation of a one-time waiver, but then are created as their own course. The name of the special topics course can be changed per semester to reflect the topic.
2. But UCCC believes the intention is to have this course in place for whichever project and community partner(s) the instructor and students are working with that semester. If this is the case, then perhaps “Selected Topics in Public History” may be better.

Update – Ryan Anne Bell, the Director of Experiential Learning and Community Engagement, suggests “Field Studies” as the most accurate course component to use. (Perhaps the name could reflect that, “Field Studies in Public History”?)

She adds: “If History is not on board with using Field Studies, I would be glad to speak with them directly about other component options that fit the course description and still allow the course to be tracked as experiential, again for data and risk management purposes.”

HIST 6101 “History of Space and Place” - Course Add

1. Request to clearly label SLOs
2. Suggestion to combine the first two sentences to start with, “This course examines...”
